Professional Experience

Charlie has a broad range of experience in financial planning and analysis (“FP&A”), business development, mergers and acquisitions, capital advisory, and corporate strategy. His background includes assisting in buy-side acquisition processes, coordinating and directing financial and operational due diligence, providing financial analyses, and performing market research. His areas of specialty include physician practices, pharmacies, medical device manufacturers, enterprise software providers, and e-commerce platforms.

Prior to joining AAG, Charlie was a corporate development associate at ALTEA Healthcare, a healthcare technology company focused on driving data integration in the chronic care space. In this role, Charlie led the Company’s external growth efforts by helping develop and implement its acquisition strategy. He assisted the Company in target selection, buy-side due diligence, and capital raising efforts. Charlie also managed other FP&A projects supporting ALTEA’s organic growth.

Prior to ALTEA, Charlie was also an investment banking analyst in the Debt Capital Markets & Restructuring Group at Piper Sandler. In this role, he assisted clients in the development of financial analyses and marketing material supporting various financings. He helped develop long-term financial models, establish valuation targets, coordinate third-party due diligence, and create management presentations.

Education

Charlie earned his bachelor of science degree in Finance from the Gies College of Business at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, graduating with high honors.

Charlie is an avid Pittsburgh Steelers fan. In his free time, he enjoys boxing, playing guitar, and watching movies.
